IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Ann H. Hamilton.
Died, at her residence in Davies county, on Thursday, November 1, 1883, of pneumonia, Mrs. Ann H. Hamilton, widow of the late Mr. Edwin Hamilton, in the 44th year of her age.

Deceased was born in Breckinridge county on the 25th day of July, 1840, her maiden name being Ann H. Hamilton. She was married to Mr. Edwin Hamilton on March 1, 1861. Although having professed religion, she had not yet united herself with any denomination. Her funeral discourse was preached by Rev. Hackett, from Revelations xxi. Blessed are they who love him, she left two charming little daughters, Maggie and Ann, and an only son, and a brother to mourn her loss.

Death has seldom reaped a home of a more devoted and pure heart, more loving and devoted mother of an amiable and noble son. All the family she performed most cheerfully, and it was her chief delight to make her home cheerful and pleasant. Hospitality ever sat by her hearth and plenty crowned her board. The hungry stranger was never turned from her door, and the poor and needy found in her a sympathetic heart and generous hand. Crowned with Christian graces, idolized by her husband and children, beloved by all who knew her, mourned by the entire community, we go to meet the Christian's reward.

"How sweet the thought that when The earth and pains of life are ended— After from beauty and home of home, And where the saints of God are bled— Our loved and lost, in joy is met, And with the blessed."

In the heavenly bliss eternal, And with the blessed—
Baking where warm gentle
One case, and all the while
The machine of the Savior's rule."

CHAPTER XIV.

The Great Southern Exposition at Louisville will never have been visited by such vast crowds of people, nay, its experience would not have been known to a limited number of people, if it had not been for the very liberal and judicious manner in which it was advertised by the Manager, Maj. J. M. Wright and his advisers. The Exposition is a thing of which the originators, Louisville, and the entire South, may be proud, and we have not heard of one single person expressing regret who have visited it. The railroads also deserve credit for having placed excursion tickets at such low rates. The great attraction and the low rate of fare have enabled many, who would not have done so under ordinary circumstances, to visit that great Louisville manufacturing establishment of Men's, Youth, School and Boys' Clothing of J. Winter & Co., corner of Third and Market Streets. Visitors are at a glance that this is the place in which to purchase an Overcoat or a suit for Fall and Winter wear. Not only on account of the great variety of goods to suit everybody's taste, but also on account of the superior workmanship. J. Winter & Co. have manufactured the goods which they have sold for the last thirty years. Ample experience and means have made their store the "Favorite" for those who wish good goods for very little money. They, being manufacturers, pay no profit to the Eastern seller of ready-made goods, goods gotten up cheap and without regard to the future wear. If J. Winter & Co. had not sold good goods and these good goods at popular prices, they never would have been able to hold the most prominent position in the clothing trade in Louisville for the past thirty years. Humbug will "play out," and side shows do not add to the quality of the material, or to the strength of sewing, and do not convert inferior trimmings into good. J. Winter & Co., corner of Third and Market Streets, purchase their goods in the piece, select good trimmings, employ the best journeymen tailors, and examine the garments carefully before they are put on the counters for sale. Whatever garment you purchase at their store you are sure that it is well made and well trimmed, and that the price is lower than at any other store in Louisville.

Mr. H. C. Morgan, 451 4th street Louisville, Ky., says: "My mother died great relief from dyspepsia and vertigo using Brown's Iron Bitters."

Splendid Christmas Gifts.

Reichman & Simonson, the enterprising proprietors of the "Mammoth Clothing, Hat and Cap House," Louisville, Ky., announce on the first page of this issue a magnificent sale of various kinds of goods to be distributed among the owners of their houses on the 21st of December. Every one who purchases a matter how small the bill—goods of their selection is presented with a complimentary ticket, which gives them a chance to draw one of the presents enumerated in the advertisement. We have dealt with this house, and can cheerfully testify to the honesty of their representatives, the quality of their goods, and the astonishing cheapness of their prices. Hence we have no hesitation in recommending them to the patronage of our country people.

Time to Stop It.
"I'm too bad, Sir or Madam, but don't get frightened. Your hair is falling out of this certain. A glance in the mirror, or an examination of the comb, will tell you the dismal story. We won't discuss the cause, but it is enough that your hair is falling out. We will prevent further loss. Let us give you the original color, softness and brilliancy. No dye, not oily, elegantly perfumed, a perfect dressing."

The attention of the Chicago paper which said a short time ago "Kentucky has no use for negroes except to hang them," is called to the fact that the people of Maryland are now building up a new state by building six houses, for some desecrating colored people, who lately lost their lives by fire, and that the dwellers are now being put up—(Mayville Bulletin).

Jealousy.
Some poet has said that "All torments of the damned we find in only they, Oh, God!"

any, then tyrant of the mind." This is gradually becoming and ungrudgingly insensible. I suffer from indigestion known to the country. Indigestion is the villain of the tragedy played upon the nerves of the stomach, and does double discount the horrors of jealousy. Indigestion is a most insidious enemy, and when indulged in, it is removed, this handsome complexion of a drenched liver, and the stomach is left in a state of exhaustion for impaired digestion, deranged nerves, and diseases of the bowels and kidneys.
